Organizational Note:

On June 16, 1980, a group of twenty-seven women from the Mobile area gathered at the local Quilts and Calicos Shop to organize a quilting guild. At this meeting of the newly-formed guild, officers were nominated and names for the group were suggested. At the next meeting, members chose Azalea City Quilters Guild as the official name of their organization, and they elected a slate of officers, with Ellen Anson serving as the first president. The members decided that the guild would meet at 7:00 p.m. on the third Monday of every month. At first the "ACQG" held its monthly meetings at a building on Dauphin Street, but in September 1980, meetings were moved to the Cottage Hill Branch of the Mobile Public Library. The next location chosen for the guild's monthly meetings was Springhill Baptist Church, where the ACQG met from September 1982 to August 1984. The next location change, when the guild began meeting in the Bay Haas Building in September 1984, required the organization to change the time of its monthly meetings from evenings to mornings. The guild has continued its practice of meeting in the daytime for more than two decades. In April 1987, the ACQG relocated once more, to Spring Hill Avenue United Methodist Church, where they have continued to meet as of March 2008.

After the Azalea City Quilters Guild was formed in June 1980, membership in the organization grew rapidly. By the time the opportunity for charter membership ended in December 1980, the guild already boasted more than thirty members. By the mid-1980s, 100 members were enrolled. Membership reached 200 at the turn of the twenty-first century, and in August 2007, the Azalea City Quilters Guild had 269 members.

As membership in the ACQG increased, so did the guild's activities. Within a year of its founding, the Azalea City Quilters Guild began participating in quilt exhibitions sponsored by museums around Mobile. Then, in April 1983, the guild held its first annual Pride of Mobile Quilt Show at Sage Avenue Armory in Mobile. The Pride of Mobile Quilt Show was an annual event until 1987, when the guild decided to hold the show only on odd-numbered years. In 2001, the show had a new name and a new location: the Azalea City Quilters Guild "Serenade of Quilts" was held in March 2001 on the Brookley campus of the University of South Alabama. In 2005, the ACQG quilt show, now nameless, moved to the Greater Gulf State Fair Grounds, where the 2007 show, called "Festival of Quilts," was also held.

In addition to its quilt shows, the Azalea City Quilters Guild has also been involved in many other activities. For most of the guild's existence, ACQG members have organized trips to regional and national quilt shows. Workshops have also been popular events for the guild. In addition, since the mid-1980s, the organization has made a quilt each year to donate to St. Mary's Home in Mobile. Other charities helped by the ACQG include the Child Advocacy Center, the Ronald McDonald House, and Project Linus. In addition to its regular meetings, the guild has also spun-off several other groups, including one that meets in the evenings and a Thursday-morning group.

The guild is a member organization in the Gulf States Quilting Association, and in May 2003 the Azalea City Quilters Guild became an incorporated organization.
